Dear Elizabeth Davis,

In your email below you point out that some of the expenditures for the project are not included as specific budget items in the original grant application. In particular, you cite a number of items totaling R 51 159.00. We have another non-Global Grant account that it also used for this project and can be used for the expenditures you site. Consequently, we have transferred this amount from that non-Global Grant account into the bank account dedicated to Rotary Global Grant (First National Bank Account number 63015620908). The transaction report for this account is provided as an attachment.

In line with your observation, you will also see that R 9798.00 has also been transferred back into the dedicated Global Grant Account for expenses that should have been paid from that other account. We apologize for miscategorization on our part.

You further ask whether we still intend to do the computer lab, which was part of our original global grant budget. As you may recall, as we were finalizing the global grant, Atisa Securities had pledged R150 000 to our global grant, contingent on our non-profit company receiving tax-exempt status on time in 2022, but because of delays on the part of South African Revenue Service, Atisa re-allocated its donation for 2022 to 2023. Consequently, at that time we agreed with you to remove the line item for the computer from the global grant but to retain the other related budget items for the computer lab in the hope that other funding would come along. However, it has become clear that the installation of a computer lab is not practical.

When the original grant was proposed, the school had someone who would be able to help with the computer lab but who has since left. Moreover, problems with electric power shedding in South Africa and security at the school make us reluctant to proceed with the computer lab. Given this situation, we would like to re-allocate the funding for the computer lab to other line items, reflecting the reality of the progression of the project.

Would it be possible to submit to you a revised budget for approval without the computer lab and reflecting the current situation with the project to date?

We look forward to hearing from you.

Sincerely,

Martin Bucher, PP Rotary Club of Durban Umhlatuzana, Durban, South Africa
